

It's my understanding that the FCC wants to displace FM signals with LPFM signals. In doing so, a particular program which I enjoy listening to and which I feel serves the public in a positive and encouraging manner might be taken away from some localities in America. I believe that K-LOVE serves residents and the local community with encouraging words that help to inform and spread good news to millions of listeners. If LPFM takes this signal away, what kind of a message is the FCC telling people? Please consider that K-LOVE gives millions of listeners hope, peace, love, and a station that's friendly to listeners. Taking this signal away is a poor decision and one which needs to be reconsidered. If you want to do something positive, please make K-LOVE more accessible to more communities in the U.S.A. Thanks for your time and attention to this important issue.

Charles Lakatos